Whiteriver Center hosts art contest for Native American NPC students

Scholarships will be awarded to the top three entries in an art contest for Native American students at Northland Pioneer College's Whiteriver Center.

Awarded artwork will automatically be entered in the annual NPC Student Juried Art Show in May 2007 at The Talon Gallery on the Show Low - White Mountain Campus.

Art contest entries will be accepted from any NPC Native American students until Tuesday, Dec. 12.

For additional information, contact the NPC Whiteriver Center office, 338-5185.

Community involvement

First-year NPC nursing student MaryBeth Holscher administers a flu shot to Colleen Renner during a recent Navajo County Health Department clinic in Show Low. MaryBeth, 42, is retraining for "the job she always wanted" after serving as a customer service representative for Compass Bank in Pinetop for several years. She enrolled at NPC in February 2005, completing all of the prerequisites to gain admission to the nursing program this past August. Eight student nurses were on hand to help with the clinic.

Students interested in the nursing program are encouraged to contact Nursing Program Advisor Marilyn Page, (800) 266-7845, ext. 6125, beanurse@npc.edu. The NPC program admits 40 students each year, 20 each at Show Low and Winslow, to the 2-year program. The deadline for submitting admission applications is in early February.
